Globalization, liberalization and free market are some of the most significant modern trends in an economy. Most economists in our country seem captivated by the spell of the free market. Consequently, nothing seems good or normal that does not accord with the requirements of the free market. A price that is determined by the seller or for that matter, established by anyone other than the aggregate of consumers seems pernicious.

Accordingly, it requires a major act of will to think of price-fixing as both normal and having a valuable economic function. In fact, price-fixing is normal in all industrialized societies because the industrial system itself provides, as an effortless consequence of its own development, the price-fixing that it requires. Modern industrial planning requires and rewards great size. Hence a comparatively small number of large firms will be competing for the same group of consumers. That each large firm will act with consideration of its own needs and thus avoid selling its products for more than its competitors' price is commonly recognized by advocates of free-market economic theories. But each firm will also act with full consideration of the needs that it has in common with the other large firms competing for the same customer. Each large firm thus avoids significant stable price cutting, because price-cutting will be prejudicial to the common interest in a stable demand for products.

Most economists do not see price-fixing when it occurs because they expect it to be brought about by a number of explicit agreements among large firms; it is not. Moreover, those economists who argue that allowing the free market to operate without interference is the most efficient method of establishing prices has not considered the economics of non-socialist countries. Most of these economies employ international price-fixing, usually in an overt fashion. Formal price fixing by cartel and informal price fixing by agreements covering the members of an industry are common place. Were there something peculiarly efficient about the free market and inefficient about price-fixing, the countries that have avoided the first and used the second would have suffered drastically in their economic development. There is no indication that has.

Socialist industry also works within a framework of controlled prices. In early 1970s the Soviet Union began to give firms and industries some flexibility in adjusting prices that a more informal evolution has accorded the capitalist system. Economists in the USA have hailed the change as a return to the free market. But the Soviet firms were not in favor of the price established by a free-market over which they exercised little influence; rather, Soviet firms acquired some power to fix prices.

Comprehension:

Traditional Indian values must be viewed both from the angle of the individual and from that of the geographically delimited agglomeration of peoples or groups enjoying a common system of leadership which we call the 'state'. The Indian state's special feature is the peaceful or perhaps mostly peaceful co-existent of social groups of various historical provenances which mutually adhere in a geographical, economic and political sense, without ever assimilating to each other in social terms, in ways of thinking or even in language. Modern Indian law will determine certain rules especially in relation to the regime of the family, upon the basis of how the lion-cloth is tied or how the turban is worn, for this may identify the litigants as members of a rational group and therefore as participants in its traditional law, though their ancestors left the region three or four centuries earlier.

The use of the word 'State' above must not mislead us. There was no such thing as a conflict between the individual and the state at least before Foreign Governments became established, just as there was no concept of state sovereignty or of any church and state dichotomy. Modern Indian Secularism has an admittedly peculiar feature: It requires the state to make a fair distribution of attention and support amongst all religions.

These blessed aspects of India's famed tolerance (Indian kings so rarely persecuted religiously groups that the exceptions prove the rule) at once struck Portuguese and other European visitors to the West Coast of India in 16th century and the impression made upon them in this and other ways gave rise, at one remove to the basic Constitution of Thomas More's Utopia. There is little about modern India that strikes one at once as Utopian but the insistence upon the inculcation of norms and the absence of bigotry and institutionalized exploitation of human or natural resources are two very different features which link the realities of India and her tradition with the essence of all Utopians.

Study the passage given below and answer the NEXT FIVE questions that follow:

If proof were needed that the organized sector of the Indian economy is globalised, look no further than the knee-jerk reaction of Jet Airways, which issued marching orders to 800 employees and then retracted following an adverse reaction, has now morphed into a strategic plan by companies to keep to keep their heads above the rising waters. This strategy is predicted on the need to cut costs and protect profit margins as far as possible rather than look to increasing revenue in what is turning out to be a slowing market. Auto majors such as Tata Motors, Ashoka Leyland and Mahindra & Mahindra have begun to cut back production and reduce man-hours at their plants across India in a bid to prevent inventory pile-up and tailor output to falling demand. It will not be long before auto component vendors follow suit, followed by firms across the product spectrum. Organized industry is learning to cope with the downside of a business cycle that first manifested itself last year in the wake of rising raw material and energy prices and in the lagged effects of high interest rates on consumer demand. In the last quarter of 2007-08, industry and manufacturing growth rates both slipped to around 5 per cent against 8.6 per cent and 9.6 per cent respectively in the previous quarter, which performance itself represented a decline from the high of 10 and 12 per cent in 2006-07.

Growth has been falling, therefore, all of 2007 -08 with the decline accelerating since January. Fiscal 2007-08 closed with a real GDP growth of 9 per cent mainly due to a double digit growth in services such as real estate, transport, hotel services and construction. With high albeit falling interest rates and worse, a risk aversion among lenders impacting these sectors as much as they had manufacturing earlier, the overall growth momentum may slow even more than officially estimated. Against this backdrop, the best bet for policymakers and producers would be to turn the downturn into an opportunity for fresh strategizing. Manufacturing firms have begun the task of cutting costs in right earnest. The real estate sector is supposedly asking for relief and so will the shipping and transport sectors, the government has to exercise discretion the way it did with the airline industry so as to encourage internal overhauling. The government will inevitably have to boost confidence and private investments at some future date through counter-cyclical spending. That future should start right away.

'Don't disturb between 2 pm – 4 pm'. I have seen such boards outside many houses in Pune. I wondered why, until someone told me that people sleep at that time and they don't like to be disturbed by unwanted visitors. A siesta in Sanskrit is a luxury nowadays. But there are people who enjoy their 40 winks even at office. It's euphemistically called a 'power nap', which rejuvenates you. J F Kennedy loved this post lunch snooze so much so that there was a presidential order, not to disturb him for an hour during the daytime. The first Mughal emperor, Zahiruddin Babar, wrote in his autobiography, Tuzuk-e-Babri, that 'India's warm and humid climate makes one feel drowsy after having lunch.'

When it comes to siesta, Bengalis and Italians are number one in the world. I, however, am of the view that this is because of the food. Rice and pasta are sleep-inducing food items. Fish adds to it because it has phosphorous, which makes one feel sleepy. The practice of the siesta is also held responsible for the Parsi community's historic uprooting from Persia. According to legend, the Arabs who invaded Persepolis in modern-day Iran during the Islamic incursions in the 10th century soon realized that the only way to conquer Zoroastrian warriors was to attack after the traditional Sunday lunch of Dhansaak, the thick mutton stew served with cardamom-scented drowsy rice is heavy enough to lull anyone into a long and peaceful siesta afterwards!

The word siesta is said to have originated from ancient Latin word 'siennete', which meant 'sleeping under tree', but not specified whether at night or during daytime. Even 'Sexta' in Spanish and Latin means the 6th hour, which is the time of rest. I have read that some corporate offices have sleeping rooms for their staff to have a power nap after lunch. But, it mustn't exceed 30 minutes. Siestas are very addictive. Just sleep one day for an hour after having lunch and next day exactly at that time, you'll feel sleepy and start yawning. There are people who're so fond of it that they can give a miss to all regular things in life of a few minutes of stolen slumber, as Allan Wanbridge aptly called it. Study the passage given below and answer the NEXT FIVE questions that follow:

On August 15, 1947, India was granted independence from British colonial dominance. This was an event of international significance. From this day onwards, the Indian Union assumed a role in world politics that was appropriate enough to modify the thinking of nations. Concepts like non-alignment, tolerance, non-violence and peaceful coexistence were introduced by India into international vocabulary. "Our dreams concern India" said the first Prime Minister of the country on the eve of achieving freedom, "but they also concern the whole world, for the world has become one". Mahatma Gandhi chose Nehru to become the first Prime Minister of Independent India. With his vision of unity of the nation, he became the architect of modern India. It was to be a federal state based on secularism- the commitment to an Indian identity, which was above all races, castes and religions. It was a vision of extraordinary dimensions.

Nehru as well as his daughter and successor, Smt. Indira Gandhi, were well aware that only a firm anchorage in the Indian identity could unite the nation and enable it to make an impact on the world. In these days of mutual independence, the western powers and America cannot afford to ignore what is happening in this region. It is possible that the fate of the Asian democracies would one day be decided on the banks of Ganges. If India fails to remain a democracy, this would trigger the fall of the whole of South and South-East Asia. That is why the Indian Prime Minister has to play a role that goes well beyond duties related to internal affairs only. It is of international political significance.

In these days of mutual independence, the western powers and America cannot afford to ignore what is happening in this region. It is possible that the fate of the Asian democracies would one day be decided on the banks of Ganges. If India fails to remain a democracy, this would trigger the fall of the whole of South and South-East Asia. That is why the Indian Prime Minister has to play a role that goes well beyond duties related to internal affairs only. It is of international political significance.

On August 15, 1947, India was granted independence from British colonial dominance. This was an event of international significance. From this day onwards, the Indian Union assumed a role in world politics that was appropriate enough to modify the thinking of nations. Concepts like non-alignment, tolerance, non-violence and peaceful coexistence were introduced by India into international vocabulary. "Our dreams concern India" said the first Prime Minister of the country on the eve of achieving freedom, "but they also concern the whole world, for the world has become one". Mahatma Gandhi chose Nehru to become the first Prime Minister of Independent India. With his vision of unity of the nation, he became the architect of modern India. It was to be a federal state based on secularism- the commitment to an Indian identity, which was above all races, castes and religions. It was a vision of extraordinary dimensions.

Nehru as well as his daughter and successor, Smt. Indira Gandhi, were well aware that only a firm anchorage in the Indian identity could unite the nation and enable it to make an impact on the world. In these days of mutual independence, the western powers and America cannot afford to ignore what is happening in this region.
