Comprehension:

My grandfather and his two sons put up cotton ginning and spinning mills and oil presses. My uncle Ujjal Singh, who was the first in the family to go to college and get a Master's degree, was put in charge of the lands and mills in the Punjab. My father became a building contractor. As if this was not enough, they went into the textile business as well. They bought a cotton mill near Delhi's Subzi Mandi. Originally named Jumna Mills, it was given a recognizably Sikh name: Khalsa Cotton Spinning and Weaving Mills. We moved into an apartment above the entrance gate. The mill had been doing poorly under its previous owners; it did worse under my grandfather and father's management. They had no experience of running a large mill and did not have enough liquid cash to replace old machinery with new. It was often closed down. The money they made in their contracting business was swallowed up by losses incurred by this mill. It brought the family to the verge of bankruptcy. In 1919 a fire reduced most of it to ashes. It is more than likely that the fire was contrived to claim insurance money.
