Q.1 Read the following passage and answer the question that follows by choosing the correct option:

The figures in this boat were those of a strong man with ragged grizzled hair and a sun-browned face, and a dark girl of nineteen or twenty, sufficiently like him to be recognisable as his daughter. The girl rowed, pulling a pair of sculls very easily; the man, with the rudder-lines slack in his hands, and his hands loose in his waistband, kept an eager look out. He had no net, hook, or line, and he could not be a fisherman; his boat had no cushion for a sitter, no paint, no inscription, no appliance beyond a rusty boat-hook and a coil of rope, and he could not be a waterman; his boat was too crazy and too small to take in cargo for delivery and he could not be a lighterman or river-carrier; there was no clue to what he looked for, but he looked for something, with a most intent and searching gaze. The tide, which had turned an hour before, was running down, and his eyes watched every little race and eddy in its broad sweep, as the boat made slight head-way against it, or drove stern foremost before it, according as he directed his daughter by a movement of his head. She watched his face as earnestly as he watched the river. But, in the intensity of her look there was a touch of dread or horror.

Allied to the bottom of the river rather than the surface, by reason of the slime and ooze with which it was covered, and its sodden state, this boat and the two figures in it obviously were doing something that they often did, and were seeking what they often sought. Half savage as the man showed, with no covering on his matted head, with his brown arms bare to between the elbow and the shoulder, with the loose knot of a looser kerchief lying low on his bare breast in a wilderness of beard and whisker, with such dress as he wore seeming to be made out of the mud that begrimed his boat, still there was a business-like usage in his steady gaze. So with every lithe action of the girl, with every turn of her wrist perhaps most of all with her look of dread or horror, they were things of usage.

Keep her out Lizzie. The tide runs strong here.

Q.6 Read the following passage and answer the question that follows by choosing the correct option:

Prem Chand was born at Lamahi, a village about four miles away from Banaras, on 31st July 1880. He descended from a family that owned some six bighas of land and ran a large family. Prem Chand's grandfather, Gur Sahai Lal, was a patwari. His father was Ajaib Lal, a clerk in the post office earning about twenty five rupees a month. His mother was Anandi Devi, a good natured and accomplished woman, reminiscent of 'Barhe Ghar ki Beti.' It is to be noted that the heroine of this story is called Anandi.

The childhood of Prem Chand was spent in the village. He was a sportive and a lively boy, very fond of playing about, stealing things from the fields. He had a sweet tooth and was particularly fond of raw sugar. At Lamahi, he had his early schooling and picked up some Urdu and Persian from a Maulvi Sahib. It is on record that he was severely punished for stealing a rupee. His story 'Kazaki', is based on his own childhood memories. Kazaki was a postal messenger who travelled long distance and always brought back something with him for the child Prem Chand. In the short story he brings a little deer for the child and is dismissed for dereliction of duty, because chasing the deer had entailed great delay in returning to the post office. Kazaki is a human figure, full of dignity and self-respect, with the milk of human kindness overflowing within him.

It may be noted here that Prem Chand was a pen-name adopted by the author later on in years. He was named Dhanpat Rai and when he started writing short stories as a government servant, the pen-name used by him was Nawab Rai. Many described him as a Nawab throughout his life. When the government proscribed his first collection of short stories, 'Soze Watan', Prem Chand discarded the pseudonym Nawab Rai and all his later work appeared under the pen-name, Prem Chand.

Q.11 Read the following passage and answer the question that follows by choosing the correct option:

The Entertaining Speech -

There was no respect for youth when I was young,
and now that I am old there is no respect for age.
I missed it coming and going.

- J. B. Priestley

Unlike the Persuasive Speech, which changes mindsets, and the informative Speech, which transfers knowledge, an Entertaining speech makes the speaker and the listener feel good about life and themselves. An Entertaining Speech is light, fun and gracious. Speeches in the form of toasts, roasts, stand-ups, and after-dinner chats are examples of entertaining speeches. An Entertaining Speech sells or promotes happiness and gratitude. Still, as speeches go, the Entertaining Speech needs a good opening, a good closing, and a fun-filled relevant middle. The closing need not be a summary or a call for action, but it needs to end on a high and happy note.

The elements of an entertaining speech are:

- Several humorous anecdotes about the characters involved
- Dialogues between characters
- A "flip" look at serious things
- Preferably spoken in the first person and told in the present tense
- Ideas and suggestions in the speech should be quick on the set-up and quicker on the punch
- Several voice modulations should be part of the delivery style
- It should not be very long

The speaker also needs to open up and get close to the audience mentally, physically, and emotionally.

Match List I with List II to complete the information given in the table:

LIST I		LIST II
A.	Persuasive Speech	I.	transfers knowledge
B.	Entertaining Speech	II.	gives a touch of reality
C.	Informative Speech	III.	changes mindsets
D.	Anecdote	IV.	makes you feel good

Choose the correct answer from the options given below:

Q.13 Read the following passage and answer the question that follows by choosing the correct option:

The Entertaining Speech -

There was no respect for youth when I was young,
and now that I am old there is no respect for age.
I missed it coming and going.

- J. B. Priestley

Unlike the Persuasive Speech, which changes mindsets, and the informative Speech, which transfers knowledge, an Entertaining speech makes the speaker and the listener feel good about life and themselves. An Entertaining Speech is light, fun and gracious. Speeches in the form of toasts, roasts, stand-ups, and after-dinner chats are examples of entertaining speeches. An Entertaining Speech sells or promotes happiness and gratitude. Still, as speeches go, the Entertaining Speech needs a good opening, a good closing, and a fun-filled relevant middle. The closing need not be a summary or a call for action, but it needs to end on a high and happy note.

The elements of an entertaining speech are:

- Several humorous anecdotes about the characters involved
- Dialogues between characters
- A "flip" look at serious things
- Preferably spoken in the first person and told in the present tense
- Ideas and suggestions in the speech should be quick on the set-up and quicker on the punch
- Several voice modulations should be part of the delivery style
- It should not be very long

The speaker also needs to open up and get close to the audience mentally, physically, and emotionally.

'An entertaining speech sells or promotes happiness and GRATITUDE. Replace the underlined word with its synonym.

1. motivation
2. kindness
3. thankfulness
4. greatness
